

ENERGY SAVING

Innovation

SMJ have developed a extensive range of energy saving products designed for the responsible energy user. It is now common knowledge that the control of electrically powered products when they are not fully in use can save the consumer substantial amounts of money. Many appliances have a standby mode that use a high amount of electricity without an obvious benefit.

SMJ's range of products increases the numbers of options to control the power, measure the power or switch off the power.

Many of these products use less than 1 Watt of power when they are in use. Compared to many appliances this may be 35 times less than they are using in standby. For example research shows that reducing the time an average homes TV's are on standby may save the average family between £30 and £40 per year.

The Energy sense range from SMJ brings an easy to understand message clearly explaining the benefit of buying one of the products with distinctive packaging that raises the profile within the retail environment.
